'Scott Kelby World Wide Photo Walk' held in Motley

By Dawn Timbs
Staples World reporter

Eighteen photographers from Central Minnesota met in Motley July 24, for the third annual "Scott Kelby World Wide Photo Walk."

Approximately 900 Photo Walks took place that day in cities all over the globe, with over 30,000 photographers participating. Seven of the walks were held in Minnesota.

Florida-based Kelby, the president of Photoshops, started this event in an effort to encourage photographers to gather socially and to share different photography techniques with one another.

As an incentive, Kelby is offering one grand prize for the best submitted photo; and 10 honorable mentions.

Participants spent the day documenting a variety of events, with hopes of taking an award winning photo.

Lisa Haste, Motley, was the organizer and team leader of this area's event. "We had more walkers, believe it or not, than cities like Bemidji, St. Cloud, Chanhassen and Rochester," Haste said.

The photographers gathered at Countryside Restaurant and then disappeared to take photos around town.

"It was a great day to take pictures in Motley because of the Two Rivers Music Fest and the parade. There were so many photo opportunities," Haste said.

She encouraged her crew to search for stories when looking through the camera lens. "Will that photo tell a story?" Haste asked the group members.

After spending a few hours on their own, the photographers reconvened at the Countryside Restaurant to share their morning's experiences.

Tonya Erickson from Staples said she concentrated on taking photos of the elderly.

Jake Rennaker, Brainerd, said he found a lot of photo opportunities during the parade. "I loved getting pictures of the clowns," he added.

Nan Stillwell, Colorado, spent time documenting activity at the flea market in Motley. "I saw the antique sign; and then found an old man nearby and asked if he'd pose for a picture by the sign. I thought that told a neat story," Stillwell said.

Many of the walkers in Motley are members of the Focal Point Photography Club in Brainerd. Some are graduates of or currently studying photography at Central Lakes College.

"I think it's important to keep up your passion, to hear ideas from others and to take different photos than you usually do," said Sara Hennen, a professional photographer from Pierz.

For most of the photographers in Motley, this was the first time they had participated in a photo walk. "I'd definitely do it again," said Zachary Toms of Brainerd.

Haste said that the high point of the day for her was sharing stories later with her fellow photographers. "Many of them witnessed older generations visiting with their families in a tender way," she said. "I believe everyone truly enjoyed their experience."

Fishing trip enjoyed by area seniors cooking for all of the men and family friends who came to fish at the family cottage on Lake Michigan, Mary recalled.

"But that was a long time ago," she added.

Although a few people sat in wheelchairs on the pontoon; and underneath the straw hats, their hair was mostly white or gray, for at least an hour that July afternoon, they were kids again.

"I got such a kick out of seeing these elderly people go from the age of 80-plus right back to their 20's," Chief Madison said. "Everyone really had a great time."

Madison said the idea to host a fishing trip for seniors was inspired by long-time Motley resident Dolores Morey.

The wife of the late Edward Morey, founder of Morey's Fish in Motley, fishing had been a major part of Dolores's life for many years.

"She used to go fishing all over the world, it was a really big deal to her," Madison said.

The police chief said he had stopped by to see Dolores one day on a welfare check.

"We got to talking about fishing and I asked her, 'If there was a way for you to go fishing again, would you go?'" Madison said.

Of course she would, was Dolores's enthusiastic response.

Madison shared this encounter with Barros and the two got to thinking about it. "Hey, why don't we bring all of the seniors out fishing?" the police chief said. "A way to show our appreciation to them for all they've done over the years."

Other people in the area thought it was a good idea as well. Auger's Resort opened up their dock for the afternoon and donated the use of a pontoon. Dave and Carolyn Lester (Coast True Value in Staples) loaned another pontoon. Jeff Halvorson was happy to donate his time.

Madison and Barros donated their time too, as well as fishing poles and life-jackets. They also picked up miscellaneous expenses such as drinking water and bait.

"It was all worth it,"

Nice sunny

Madison said.

Unfortunately, Dolores (the inspiration for the event) was not feeling well enough to take part in the fishing excursion, Madison said. "I know she'd be here if she could."

Because of her, however, a number of seniors enjoyed an afternoon out on Lake Shamaineau.

"It was a great day," Madison said. "I hope we can do it again next summer."
